Confidentiality Obligations for Lawyer Blogging and Other Public Commentary

*Lawyers who blog or engage in other public commentary may not reveal information relating to a representation, including information contained in a public record, unless authorized by a provision of the Model Rules.*¹

Introduction

Lawyers comment on legal topics in various formats. The newest format is online publications such as blogs,² listserves, online articles, website postings, and brief online statements or microblogs (such as Twitter®) that “followers” (people who subscribe to a writer’s online musings) read. Lawyers continue to present education programs and discuss legal topics in articles and chapters in traditional print media such as magazines, treatises, law firm white papers, and law reviews. They also make public remarks in online informational videos such as webinars and podcasts (collectively “public commentary”).³

Lawyers who communicate about legal topics in public commentary must comply with the Model Rules of Professional Conduct, including the Rules regarding confidentiality of information relating to the representation of a client. A lawyer must maintain the confidentiality of information relating to the representation of a client, unless that client has given informed consent to the disclosure, the disclosure is impliedly authorized to carry out the representation, or the disclosure is permitted by Rule 1.6(b). A lawyer’s public commentary may also implicate the lawyer’s duties under other Rules, including Model Rules 3.5 (Impartiality and Decorum of the Tribunal) and 3.6 (Trial Publicity).

Online public commentary provides a way to share knowledge, opinions, experiences, and news. Many online forms of public commentary offer an interactive comment section, and, as such, are also a form of social media.⁴ While technological advances have altered how lawyers

² A “blog” is commonly understood to be a website consisting of written entries (posts) regularly updated and typically written in an informal or conversational style by an individual or small group. As recently described in a California State Bar advisory opinion, “[b]logs written by lawyers run the gamut from those having nothing to do with the legal profession, to informational articles, to commentary on legal issues and the state of our system of justice, to self-promotional descriptions of the attorney’s legal practice and courtroom successes to overt advertisements for the attorney or her law firm.” State Bar of Cal. Comm’n on Prof’l Responsibility & Conduct Op. 2016-196 (2016).

³ These are just examples of public written communications but this opinion is not limited to these formats. This opinion does not address the various obligations that may arise under Model Rules 7.1-7.5 governing advertising and solicitation, but lawyers may wish to consider their potential application to specific communications.

communicate, and therefore may raise unexpected practical questions, they do not alter lawyers' fundamental ethical obligations when engaging in public commentary.⁵

Duty of Confidentiality Under Rule 1.6

Model Rule 1.6(a) provides:

A lawyer shall not reveal information relating to the representation of a client unless the client gives informed consent, the disclosure is impliedly authorized in order to carry out the representation or the disclosure is permitted by paragraph (b).

As Comment [2] emphasizes, “[a] fundamental principle in the client-lawyer relationship is that, in the absence of the client’s informed consent, the lawyer must not reveal information relating to the representation.”

This confidentiality rule “applies not only to matters communicated in confidence by the client but also to all information relating to the representation, whatever its source.”⁶ In other words, the scope of protection afforded by Rule 1.6 is far broader than attorney-client privileged information.

Unless one of the exceptions to Rule 1.6(a) is applicable, a lawyer is prohibited from commenting publicly about any information related to a representation. Even client identity is protected under Model Rule 1.6.⁷ Rule 1.6(b) provides other exceptions to Rule 1.6(a).⁸ However, because it is highly unlikely that a disclosure exception under Rule 1.6(b) would apply to a ask questions suggests that, where practicable, a lawyer include appropriate disclaimers on websites, blogs and the like, such as “reading/viewing this information does not create an attorney-client relationship.”

Lawyer blogging may also create a positional conflict. See D.C. Bar Op. 370 (2016) (discussing lawyers’ use of social media advising that “[c]aution should be exercised when stating positions on issues, as those stated positions could be adverse to an interest of a client, thus inadvertently creating a conflict.”) See also ELLEN J. BENNETT, ELIZABETH J. COHEN & HELEN W. This opinion does not address positional conflicts.

⁶ MODEL RULES OF PROF’L CONDUCT R. 1.6 cmt. [3] (2017). There is also a general principle noted in the Restatement (Third) of the Law Governing Lawyers that “[c]onfidential client information does not include what a lawyer learns about the law, legal institutions such as courts and administrative agencies, and similar public matters in the course of representing clients.” AMERICAN LAW INSTITUTE, RESTATEMENT OF THE LAW (THIRD) THE LAW GOVERNING LAWYERS §59, cmt. e (1998). It is beyond the scope of this opinion to define what specific elements will be considered to distinguish between protected client information and information about the law when they entwine.

lawyer's public commentary, we assume for this opinion that exceptions arising under Rule 1.6(b) are not applicable.⁹

Significantly, information about a client's representation contained in a court's order, for example, although contained in a public document or record, is not exempt from the lawyer's duty of confidentiality under Model Rule 1.6.¹⁰ The duty of confidentiality extends generally to information related to a representation whatever its source and without regard to the fact that others may be aware of or have access to such knowledge.¹¹

A violation of Rule 1.6(a) is not avoided by describing public commentary as a "hypothetical" if there is a reasonable likelihood that a third party may ascertain the identity or situation of the client from the facts set forth in the hypothetical.¹² Hence, if a lawyer uses a hypothetical when offering public commentary, the hypothetical should be constructed so that there is no such likelihood.

The salient point is that when a lawyer participates in public commentary that includes client information, if the lawyer has not secured the client's informed consent or the disclosure is

See also In re Anonymous, 932 N.E.2d 671 (Ind. 2010) (neither client's prior disclosure of information relating to her divorce representation to friends nor availability of information in police reports and other public records absolved lawyer of violation of Rule 1.6); Iowa S. Ct. Attorney Disciplinary Bd. v. Marzen, 779 N.W.2d 757 (Iowa 2010) (all lawyer-client communications, even those including publicly available information, are confidential); Lawyer Disciplinary Bd. v. McGraw, 461 S.E.2d 850 (W. Va. State Bar*, 744 S.E.2d 611 (Va. 2013) (rejecting state bar's interpretation of Rule 1.6 as prohibiting lawyer from posting on his blog information previously revealed in completed public criminal trials of former clients). See discussion of Hunter, infra, at note 20.

¹¹ ABA Comm. on Ethics & Prof'l Responsibility, Formal Op. 04-433 (2004) ("Indeed, the protection afforded by Rule 1.6 is not forfeited even when the information is available from other sources or publicly filed, such as in a malpractice action against the offending lawyer.")

¹² MODEL RULES OF PROF'L RESPONSIBILITY R. 1.6 cmt. [4] (2017). The possibility of violating Rule 1.6 using hypothetical facts was discussed in ABA Formal Opinion 98-411, which addressed a lawyer's ability to consult with another lawyer about a client's matter. That opinion was issued prior to the adoption of what is now Rule 1.6(b)(4) which permits lawyers to reveal information relating to the representation of a client to the extent the lawyer reasonably believes necessary to secure legal advice about the lawyer's compliance with these Rules. However, the directive provided in Formal Opinion 98-411 remains sound, namely, that a lawyer use caution when constructing a hypothetical. For an illustrative case, see In re Peshek, M.R. 23794, 2009 PR 00089 (Ill. 2010). Peshek was suspended for sixty days for violating Rule 1.6. Peshek served as a Winnebago County Public defender for about 19 years. After being assaulted by a client, Peshek began publishing an Internet blog, about a third of which was devoted to discussing her work at the public defender's office and her clients. Peshek's blog contained numerous entries about conversations with clients and various details of their cases, and Peshek referred to her clients by either first name, a derivative of their first name, or their jail ID number, which were held to be disclosures of confidential information in violation of Rule 1.6. She was suspended from practice for 60 days.

not otherwise impliedly authorized to carry out the representation, then the lawyer violates Rule 1.6(a).¹³ Rule 1.6 does not provide an exception for information that is “generally known” or contained in a “public record.”¹⁴ Accordingly, if a lawyer wants to publicly reveal client information, the lawyer¹⁵ must comply with Rule 1.6(a).¹⁶

First Amendment Considerations

While it is beyond the scope of the Committee’s jurisdiction to opine on legal issues in formal opinions, often the application of the ethics rules interacts with a legal issue. Here lawyer speech relates to First Amendment speech. Although the First Amendment to the United States Constitution guarantees individuals’ right to free speech, this right is not without bounds.¹⁷ Lawyers’ professional conduct may be constitutionally constrained by various professional regulatory standards as embodied in the Model Rules, or similar state analogs. For example, when a lawyer acts in a representative capacity, courts often conclude that the lawyer’s free speech rights are limited.¹⁸

¹³ We again note that Rule 1.6(b) provides other exceptions to Rule 1.6(a).

¹⁴ Model Rule 1.9 addresses the duties lawyers owe to former clients. Rule 1.9(c)(1) permits a lawyer, who has formerly represented a client, to use information related to the representation that has become generally known to the disadvantage of a former client, and Rule 1.9(c)(2) prohibits a lawyer from revealing information relating to the representation except as the Rules permit or require with respect to a current client. This opinion does not address these issues under Model Rule 1.9. The generally known exception in Rule 1.9(c)(1) is addressed in ABA Formal Opinion 479.

¹⁵ Lawyers also have ethical obligations pursuant to Rules 5.1 and 5.3 to assure that lawyers and staff they supervise comply with these confidentiality obligations.

¹⁶ In addition to the requirements of Rules 1.6(a), a lawyer may consider other practical client relations and ethics issues before discussing client information in public commentary to avoid disseminating information that the client may not want disseminated. For instance, Model Rule 1.8(b) reads: “A lawyer shall not use information relating to representation of a client to the disadvantage of the client unless the client gives informed consent, except as permitted or required by these Rules.” Rule 1.8(b) could be read to suggest that a lawyer may use client information if it does not disadvantage a client. The lawyer, nevertheless, has a common-law fiduciary duty not to profit from using client information even if the use complies with the lawyer’s ethical obligations. See RESTATEMENT OF THE LAW (THIRD) THE LAW GOVERNING LAWYERS § 60(2) (1998) (“a lawyer who uses confidential information of a client for the lawyer’s pecuniary gain other than in the practice of law must account to the client for any profits made”). Accord D.C. Bar Op. 370 (2016) (“It is advisable that the attorney share a draft of the proposed post or blog entry with the client, so there can be no miscommunication regarding the nature of the content that the attorney wishes to make public. It is also advisable, should the client agree that the content may be made public, that the attorney obtain that client’s consent in a written form.”)

The plain language of Model Rule 1.6 dictates that information relating to the representation, even information that is provided in a public judicial proceeding, remains protected by Model Rule 1.6(a).¹⁹ A lawyer may not voluntarily disclose such information, unless the lawyer obtains the client's informed consent, the disclosure is impliedly authorized to carry out the representation, or another exception to the Model Rule applies.²⁰

At least since the adoption of the ABA Canons of Ethics, the privilege of practicing law has required lawyers to hold inviolate information about a client or a client's representation beyond that which is protected by the attorney-client privilege. Indeed, lawyer ethics rules in many jurisdictions recognize that the duty of confidentiality is so fundamental that it arises before a lawyer-client relationship forms, even if it never forms,²¹ and lasts well beyond the end of the professional relationship.²² It is principally, if not singularly, the duty of confidentiality that enables and encourages a client to communicate fully and frankly with his or her lawyer.²³

Ethical Constraints on Trial Publicity and Other Statements

Model Rule 3.5 prohibits a lawyer from seeking to influence a judge, juror, prospective juror, or other official by means prohibited by law. Although using public commentary with the client's informed consent may be appropriate in certain circumstances, lawyers should take care not to run afoul of other limitations imposed by the Model Rules.²⁴

²⁰ One jurisdiction has held that a lawyer is not prohibited from writing a blog that includes information relating to a representation that was disclosed in an open public judicial proceeding after the public proceeding had concluded. In Hunter v. Virginia State Bar, 744 S.E.2d 611 (Va. 2013) the Supreme Court of Virginia held that the application of Virginia Rule of Professional Conduct 1.6(a) to Hunter's blog posts was an unconstitutional infringement of Hunter's free speech rights. The Committee regards Hunter as limited to its facts. Virginia's Rule 1.6 is different than the ABA Model Rule. The Virginia Supreme Court rejected the Virginia State Bar's position on the interpretation and importance of Rule 1.6 because there was “no evidence advanced to support it.” But see People vs. Isaac which acknowledges Hunter but finds a violation of Colorado Rule 1.6. We note, further, that the holding in Hunter has been criticized. See Jan L. Jacobowitz & Kelly Rains Jesson, Fidelity Diluted: Client Confidentiality Give Way to the First Amendment & Social Media in Virginia State Bar ex rel. Third District Committee v. Horace Frazier Hunter, 36 CAMPBELL L. REV. 75, 98-106 (2013).

²³ See generally Preamble to ABA Model Rules for a general discussion of the purposes underlying the duty of confidentiality. See also GEOFFREY C. HAZARD JR. & W. WILLIAM HODES, THE LAW OF LAWYERING, §§ 9.2 & 9.3 at 9-6, 9-14 (3d ed. Supp. 2012).

Lawyers engaged in an investigation or litigation of a matter are subject to Model Rule 3.6, Trial Publicity. Paragraph (a) of Rule 3.6 (subject to the exceptions provided in paragraphs (b) or (c)) provides that:

A lawyer who is participating or has participated in the investigation or litigation of a matter shall not make an extrajudicial statement that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know will be disseminated by means of public communication and will have a substantial likelihood of materially prejudicing an adjudicative proceeding in the matter.

Thus any public commentary about an investigation or ongoing litigation of a matter made by a lawyer would also violate Rule 3.6(a) if it has a substantial likelihood of materially prejudicing an adjudicative proceeding in the matter, and does not otherwise fall within the exceptions in paragraphs (b) or (c) of Model Rule 3.6.²⁵

Conclusion

Lawyers who blog or engage in other public commentary may not reveal information relating to a representation that is protected by Rule 1.6(a), including information contained in a public record, unless disclosure is authorized under the Model Rules.

²⁵ Pa. Bar Ass'n Formal Op. 2014-300 (2014) (lawyer involved in pending matter may not post about matter on social media). This opinion does not address whether a particular statement "will have a substantial likelihood of materially prejudicing an adjudicative proceeding" within the meaning of Model Rule 3.6.
